

ABSTRACT

A microarray originally developed for analyzing intracellular RNA expressions can be used to easily load polynucleotides onto a chip and to instantaneously determine polynucleotides
5 (aptamers) capable of binding to a target molecule. Namely, the present inventors discovered that a microarray can be used to rapidly and efficiently obtain aptamers that bind to a target molecule.